Mercantile Fallures in 1856. The following statement of failures in the United Mercantile Failures in the United States for the year 1856.

The weekly reports of failures, published originalstables, &c., with small Orchard; Peach, Apple, Pear, Plum, Cherry, Orange and Lemon Trees, with a Creek running on ted last year—1856—amount to more than twentytravagant to put them down at an average of $20 .-000 each, which would give an aggregate of $54,100,-000. The probability is that the creditors of these failures have not received, on an average, more than 25 per cent of their claims, which involves a loss of about $40,000,000. This immense amount, lost by a class of merchants engaged principally in the dry goods trade, can hardly give an idea of the losses by failures to blow harder and stronger; the storm was rapidly among them, as a class, than any other. The losses among them do not form, however, the bulk of the aggregate losses of the country by bankruptcy or failure. It is a very extraordinary fact that most of the new enterprises of the country fail in first hands. that the originators of almost every new project are DY VIRTUE OF A DEED of the County Court of New losers by it, and that it is only after numerous changes, and the acquisition of more knowledge and experience, that the best of them prove productive al valuable tracts in said county, subject to the Widow's and successful. A CALIFORNIA CRUISE.

Narrative of a Woman who lived eighteen years alone upon the Island of San Nicholas.

Captain C. J. W. Russell, who will be recollected y the readers of the Bulletin as the writer of many valuable articles in its columns on the subject of California Fisheries," has contributed to Hutching's Magazine an interesting narrative of a woman who lived eighteen years alone upon the Island of San Nicholas, one of the Santa Barbara group, off the lower coast, and situated about 43 deg. 15 min. north latitude. While stationed in that quarter, making tidal observations for the United States Government, Captain Ru sell received from one George Nedevir, an old California resident, the following remarkable history: Twenty years ago, the whole of the Indian tribes inhabiting the Santa Barbara group of islands were engaged in a fierce and exterminating war with each other, and to such an extent was this deadly hostility waged that already the population had very much diminished, and would, in all probability, before many years, become entirely extinct. To prevent this, and at the same time to ameliorate the condition of the Indians, the good Fathers of the Mission of Santa Barbara conceived the idea of removing them to the main land, where they might be watched over, 16 improved and preserved, under their immediate superintendance. For this purpose they visited the islands, in company with a few partially civilized Indians, and explained to them the advantages of removing to the Mission. They listened attentively to the proposal, at d finally consented to go, on promises of protection from their natural enemies being given by the Fathers.

Accordingly, a small vessell was sent to the different islands, and the various tribes were taken, one by one, to the Mission of Santa Barbara. But while the last of the Indians were embarking, at the island all the adjacent rocks were examined, but no child could be found. Almost frantic, the mother requested the captain to wait while she went into the interior to search for her child, to which he reluctantly consented. As night closed down in darkness, heavy masses of clouds rolled up from the horizon, and cave evidence of a coming storm. All were anxious for the return of the woman and her child, before it broke upon them, but still they came not. The wind began increasing; and as the groups of Indians on board strained their eyes, trying to discover in the dark? ness, some object that resembled the returning woman and her child, yet saw them not, there were many sad hearts and anxious counterances that night, on their account. The storm at last came on in all its fury, tossing their little vessel up and down like feather, and compelled them at last, though reluctantly, to put to sea for safety, before any tidings of the absent ones could be received. Although the cargo of living freight reached Santa Barbara, before the vessel could return for the woman, it was wrecked and entirely lost; and as no other could be obtained at that time, the poor woman had to remain upon the island, where she lived, alone, for eighteen years; no doubt forgotten or given up as long since dead.

After the discovery of gold, it was rumored that
